The Philippines and Thailand: A Reversal of Fortune? A Public Forum on Comparative Politics and Economic Development

Seminar Room, GT-Toyota Asian Cultural Center, Asian Center
2:30-4 p.m.

Using political economy, state-society and cultural lenses, the public forum examines how political factors link up to economic development. It also interrogates the narratives of economic growth and decline from different perspectives.

Three speakers will discuss the role of the Thai middle class and technocrats in political transformation and economic development; compare and contrast the nature of political and economic institutions in the Philippines and Thailand vis-a-vis the trajectories of their economies; and explore the question of recent Thai politics from cultural perspectives.

The forum is free and open to the public. Seating is first-come, first-served, but participants are encouraged to sign up online to expedite the registration process on the day of the forum.

Family Picture: A Study on the Influence of News Media on the Voting Public's Perceived Image of Political Dynasties in the Province of Nueva Ecija

College of Mass Communication Auditorium
3-4:30 p.m.

The paper aims to discover how the news media contribute to the voting public's formation of their perceived image regarding political dynasties in Nueva Ecija.

The study also shows that the use of social media provides respondents with more in-depth information about dynasties and weakens geographical boundaries through the presentation of diverse news about political clans.

For more information, please email plarideljournal@gmail.com.

About the Speaker

Ms. Jeannica Mae M. Rosario is currently an Instructor at University of the Philippines' College of Mass Communication (UP CMC), where she handles introductory courses in communication and computer technology. She received her bachelor's degree in Communication Research (Magna cum Laude) at UP CMC and is currently pursuing her master's degree in Psychology at the UP College of Social Sciences and Philosophy.

Asian Languages Extramural Classes (Cycle 2)

UP Department of Linguistics
8 a.m.–5 p.m.

In line with the UP Department of Linguistics Extension Agenda, the Department undertakes extension activities with its goal of integrating linguistic knowledge into language pedagogy that focuses on the teaching and promotion of Asian Languages.

The Department has been offering extramural classes in Asian languages since 2008, teaching Bahasa Indonesia/Malaysia, Japanese, Korean, Mandarin and Thai to individuals from the University and other institutions. This program is envisioned to reach out to people who want to learn these languages in an institution like the University in line with their career needs / plans or personal interests. It has also been a way to accommodate students who are not able to enroll these languages during the regular semester due to the limited number of slots.

For inquiries, please visit linguistics.upd.edu.ph or call 926-9887.

Linguistics for Language Teachers

UP Department of Linguistics
9 a.m.—12 noon; 1-4 p.m.

A one-week seminar based on a continuing linguistic research into the differences between unrelated languages (e.g., English and Filipino), and between language varieties (e.g., Philippine English and International English). It serves to make the participants appreciate that learning of a second language is, first and foremost, exposure to exemplars of that language.

The seminar aims to clarify the concepts of grammaticality and error, as well as the relation between grammar and perception of reality, and the effect of grammar and lexicon on decision-making. It hopes to develop the participants into beginning linguists, working on their own research into English, Filipino and their own vernacular towards enhancing their language learning and teaching.

Given the short period of the seminar, the participants are also encouraged to maintain their scholarly linkage with the UP Department of Linguistics whose faculty can guide them in collaborative research.

For inquiries, please visit linguistics.upd.edu.ph or call 926-9887.
